

World Geography 3202/3200

Unit 5 Secondary and Tertiary Activities

Natural Input	Human Input	Conditioning Process	Analytic Process
Synthetic Process	Labour Intensive	Capital Intensive	Heavy Industry
Light Industry	Value Added	Resource Oriented Industry	Market Oriented Industry
Agglomerating Tendency	Employment Structure	GNP	GNP per Capita
CFC	Acid Rain	Distributive Activity	Financial Activity
Personal Services	Government Activities	Public Sector	Private Sector
Tertiary Sector	Quaternary Sector	Climate Oriented Site	Landscape Oriented Site
Culture Oriented Site	Greenhouse Gases	Economic Development	Social Development

1. What are the 3 physical site cost factors that help decide where to build a manufacturing facility?
2. What is the difference between a weight-gain and weight-loss product?
3. What is the advantage of the agglomerating tendency?
4. What are some of the advantages of industrial parks?
5. What characteristics of a labour force would be attractive to an industry?
6. Explain how government subsidies influence the location of an industry.
7. Identify the types of tertiary activity.
8. What are some of the factors that help determine the location of tertiary activities?
9. What is quaternary activity?
10. What factors affect the location of the quaternary industry?
11. What are some of the reasons why international tourism increased in the last 25-30 years?
12. What is the difference between GNP and GNP per Capita?
13. How is employment structure related to economic development?
14. Why is it beneficial to use more than one indicator when assessing a country's level of economic development?
15. What relationship exists between Tertiary Activity and Economic Development? See page 241-242 and discuss the connection.

This is to be used as a guide to your study however you are still responsible for all content given in your notes. Also keep in mind the areas from chapters 13 and 14 of your textbook that you covered while doing in-class work.